

Irving Penn was one of the twentieth century's great photographers, known for his arresting images and masterful printmaking. Despite being celebrated as one of Vogue's top photographers for more than sixty years, Penn remained an intensely private man who avoided the limelight and pursued his work with quiet and relentless dedication. His refined, minimalist approach remains a timeless inspiration to this day. Above, Penn captures model Samantha Jones dressed in an apple-green chiffon dress by Shannon Rodgers for Jerry Silverman, paired with earrings by Pakula, and coiffure by Kenneth (Manhattan's poshest hair salon at the time), for Vogue in 1967.

Anjelica Huston The actress and director once said, "My biggest ambition is never to be bored". In her lifetime she has modeled for top photographers including Richard Avedon and Andy Warhol, was frequently snapped carousing at Studio 54, was ensconced in a two decades-long relationship with Hollywood bad boy Jack Nicholson, and is world-famous for her coolly elegant portrayals of tough-minded, self-sufficient women (no one will ever forget her rendition of Morticia Adams)—she's also won an Academy Award and a Golden Globe. It seems the second child of film director John Huston has remained true to her ambitions. Above, the model (and future actress) poses in a Calder necklace in New York in 1976.
